a sovereign. g George chooses also his permaord in Waiting, which post he has wed on Lord Annaly. His Majesty as appointed as Keeper of the Privy apply to Pursa Sir William Carington. He is to Lord Carrington, but elects spell his name in a different manner; d his marriage in 1871 is worthy of note eing one of the first of the now long Anglo-American alliances.

Lord Knollys and Sir Arthur Bigge are to joint private secretaries. Lord knollys has for forty years been the futhful friend and trusted counsellor of yalty and his deep affection for King Fiward is a fact that will never be forcotten. His sister, Miss Charlotte Knollys, has been in attendance on Queen Alexandra since 1863, and it will be remembered that his parents, Sir William and Lady Knollys, were about the court of Queen Victoria.

This recalls to mind a funny story. Old folks are aware that the birth of the ate Duke of Clarence was somewhat premature. His baby clothes were not ready and the small but precious arrival was wrapped in cotton wool which had been taken off Lady Knollys's last new bonnet from Paris. It may not be genrally known that it was through the Receive family that close relations were Rothschilds

Sir Arthur Bigge has for years been special friend of his present Majesty is an experienced courtier and acted as groots in waiting to Queen Victoria long ago as 1880. He is clever and factful but somewhat silent, and King leorge was once heard to say that one Sir Arthur's good qualities was that he preferred thinking to talking.

His Majesty has reappointed four of the grooms in waiting who were in the service of his late Majesty, and Ed-ward Wallington, who was in his former sehold. The new appointments are hose of Col. William Lambton, a brother o lord Durham and a distinguished scider, and Capt Seymour Fortescur. a prother of Lord Fortescue and a naval ficer who acted as equerry to the late hog Edward As regards equerries King George has retained in his service the four who were in his household as Prince of Wales. and the new appointments are those of Charles Legge, Col. Frederick Ponsonby and Major Wigram. The Ponsoneys are a family who have been much about the court and Col. Fritz held the same post in the late household of our late sovereign. Col. Charles Legge is only prother of Lord Dartmouth and acted in the same capacity at the court of King Edward VII. Now we will take a look at the great offices in the royal household that are political appointments and w hich do not ange at the accession of a new sovereign change at the accession of a new sovereign. The post of lord steward, now held by Lord Beauchamp, is one of the most important. In his hands are placed the whole direction of the royal household below staris, and he has authority over as servants in the toyal establishment. The official designation of the office over which he presides is the board of green cloth, and he carries the staff of his office at high ceremonials and at last may have high ceremonials and at last may have e saiduty of breaking it over the grave
